Sandwich Based InterVations Releases MailCOPA 6.01 E-Mail Software

Sandwich, MA -- April 1, 2004 – MailCOPA 6.01 by InterVations is now released. The latest version of MailCOPA includes SPAM filtering and is immune to viruses aimed at other Windows e-mail clients. MailCOPA was the first true multi-user e-mail client allowing any number of networked computers to access a single e-mail account. MailCOPA is a perfect solution for multiple user groups such as reservations, technical support or any application where more than one user accesses the same e-mail account. Because MailCOPA updates all users “on the fly”, it alerts all users to which messages have been opened and/or replied to.

The award winning MailCOPA e-mail client handles multiple e-mail accounts for a specified user as well offering options for each user whether on the same, or a networked computer. A major benefit for mobile users is that MailCOPA cycles SMTP gateways, removing the agony of resetting servers.

According to David Rusk, IT Manager, D. Lawless Wholesale, “MailCOPA has changed the way we do business. Its multi-user, networking capability has increased our work output tremendously. Our Internet business generates a massive amount of email and MailCOPA allows us to handle it smoothly. No more second-guessing if all customers are being taken care of. With customizable message filtering, stationery, built-in SPAM control, and automatic timed mail collections, MailCOPA almost runs itself. We have used other email clients in the past and none has even come close to doing what MailCOPA has done for us. We highly recommend it for the business environment that wants to get things done.”

Simon Craythorn is president of the US office of InterVations, which also has offices in the U.K. InterVations is well known for a number of niche software products used in the merchant marine, video surveillance and golf sports arenas.
